Kentucky Partner: More Than Disaster Recovery

Brethren Disaster Ministries (BDM) Rebuilding Program's local partner in Eastern Kentucky's Letcher County to support the recovery from July 2022 flooding is HOMES, Inc. (HOMES). Originally a project of Mennonite Central Committee, HOMES began in the 1980s and has always focused on more than just initial disaster recovery by working to repair homes in the area and to provide affordable rental properties.

HOMES approaches its disaster recovery work with an eye toward the future. It has made mitigation a priority to make sure that survivors, whether returning to their homes or moving to new homes on higher ground, are not impacted by flooding in the same way again. Before making repairs to a home, it is raised above the flood level. BDM has worked on some of these homes to build the decking that is required to enter the elevated house. HOMES is also part of larger projects such as the Higher Ground Communities which allow families to move into a new house on reclaimed coal mining land far from the flood plain. This includes the homes in Thompson Branch and Chestnut Ridge, supported by the work of BDM volunteers.

HOMES has developed many initiatives in its efforts to look beyond construction work on houses to support the community and their ability to afford to live and work there. One such initiative is its solar program, developed as a "social enterprise" to address the growing cost of electricity. For some families, including those who own the new houses that BDM volunteers have helped to build, this allows them to stay in their homes with a monthly electricity bill of around $25. HOMES is able to use the profits from residents and businesses who can afford to pay the full amount for the solar installation to support the other work that they do for lower income families needing housing support.

Find out more about the work that HOMES is doing in the community, in addition to the work BDM is supporting, at their website www.homesincorporated.org.

Solar panels can be seen on the roofs of several Thompson Branch (Letcher County, Ky.) homes on which BDM volunteers worked.

Pastor's Column

One Thursday morning last June, I was working on my sermon at Fintel Library when I received a text message from Carol, who was just finishing up that week's Women's Faith Study on The Chosen:

The women's group requests a sermon series on the Sermon on the Mount. We think there's a year's worth of sermons.

This was certainly an interesting change of pace from my normal Thursday morning! And, as it turns out, one that I was more prepared for than anyone might have imagined.

You know, that's interesting. I had so much fun writing the Brethren Press Devotional booklet that I've been thinking of asking Wendy McFadden if they would publish a similar one on the Sermon on the Mount. It would take a sermon series or some such thing to make that possible...I went so far and created an outline of this project a few years ago...It has 37 entries.

So, I got to work. This fall, our Pathfinders Sunday School class has been taking a slow walk through The Sermon on the Mount—and an even slower walk through the Lord's Prayer—loosely following some old Bible study discussion guides published by Brethren Press in the late 1980's. And I've spoken with Brethren Press; they recognize how long it's been since they've published something on the Sermon on the Mount and are open to a new project. We're working together to determine what might best suit the needs of the wider denomination. Stay tuned!

But more immediately for Oak Grove's needs, I'm glad to respond to the Women's Faith Study request for a sermon series on the Sermon on the Mount, found in Matthew chapters 5-7. We will begin on Sunday, January 11, 2026 with two weeks of introductory material from Matthew chapter 4. In my study, I'm realizing how important it is to understand both Jesus' wilderness temptation (Matthew 4:1-11) as well as Jesus' initial ministry and calling the first disciples (Matthew 4:12-25) as a precursor to how we should interpret his sermon in the following three chapters. After the introduction, we'll take the Beatitudes (Matthew 5:3-11) one at a time, a list which will leave us on the cusp of Holy Week.

My approach to the Sermon on the Mount will be to interpret it in keeping with Jesus' conclusion in Matthew 7:24: Everyone, then, who hears these words of mine and acts on them will be like a wise man who built his house on rock. We will assume that Jesus gave us these words, ideas, images, and instructions intending that we would build our lives—both individually and collectively—around these words, putting them into effect in our daily living. As such, they will serve us as a confession of faith: a list of core beliefs we deem essential to following Jesus in our day and time.

Hopefully you'll see that conveyed in the logo that Debbie Noffsinger (a longtime friend and magnificent graphic designer) created for our inspiration as we proceed through these sermons. As we enter this new year, take some time to read the Sermon on the Mount. Maybe you'll even want to attempt memorizing portions of it so that you always have these important words of Jesus close by to guide your living!

Pastor Tim
